	Child and Adult Care Professionals	Stephens, et al	2004	9-12
	Key Features: Intended as an occupational directed publication for grades 11 and 12. The emphasis is on development and care of children and older adults. The text and supporting materials help prepare students to pursue the CDA credential. Text addresses the care needs of older adults and the positive interaction between children and older adults (intergenerational). Ethics in Action features help students relate to and deal with ethical dilemmas often found in the workplace.
	Instructor Resource Guide (Free: 1:30 Student Editions Purchased)
	The Developing Child	Brisbane	2004	9-12
	Key Features: A child development program designed for grades 9-12. It provides a comprehensive overview of how children develop and the importance of this knowledge in both parenting and careers related to children. Brain development research is unlocking how the brain develops and works. These findings and their application to parenting and childcare are integrated throughout the program. A special brain development symbol identifies related information in the text. Development through age 12 is included. Child-related career options are presented in every chapter. These go beyond the more commonly known preschool teacher and pediatric nurse to include the great diversity of opportunities. Real-life connections are made throughout to parenting, family, community, workplace skills, technology, and other subject areas. Students understand the importance and applications of what they are learning.
	Teacher Wraparound Edition (Free: 1:30 Student Editions Purchased)
	Families Today	Sasse	2004	9-12
	Key Features: Offers a clear practical approach providing students with the information and skills they need to handle the challenges of today. It emphasizes acting responsibly, using values as guideposts, building character, and constantly improving relationship skills. Covers Family and Consumer Sciences National Standards for Family courses as well as Interpersonal Relationships courses through a range of topics – families and society, balancing work and family life, conflict resolution, divorce, building a strong marriage and more. Chapters are divided into manageable sections for flexibility in course planning. Students use checklists to rate personal progress with directed thinking, communication, leadership and management skills.
